Introduction

“I’m a poet,
and I know it,
I’ve got my whole life to show it
I feel it in the winter,
I feel it in the spring,
I feel it when I whisper,
I feel it when I sing...”

It’s been a joy to work with the students and faculty at PS90 this spring. In this anthology, or “poetry room,” you will find things that delight and surprise you. Unicorns, spring puddles, cats, and flowers, among many other things, are contained inside. You will read poems about spring, Brooklyn, night sounds, mountains, imagined night adventures and the letter O. You will enter a room filled with sensory details, gorgeous imagery, playful language and hard work.

During our time together, we read poetry by Langston Hughes, Naomi Shihab Nye, Edward Lear, e.e.cummings, Eve Merriam, Pablo Neruda and Sonia Sanchez, among others. Through literature, we went owling, and on an adventure with the jumbies. We tasted watermelons in a new way. We went to the moon and looked inside of a kaleidoscope. We looked inside of a stone and at daffodils and listened as the rain fell on us. We went to the top of a mountain and discovered, through our imaginations, that a mountain could be as cute as an ice cream cone and as soft as a rabbit’s ears and all sorts of other things! We learned how to look at the world as poets, noticing things that other people might not notice, imagining things that other people might not imagine.

PS90 is a school that truly nurtures creativity and learning. Thank you Ms. Sonco, Ms. Parente, Ms. Fox, Ms. Mendoza, Ms. Sigler, and Ms. Wnek for welcoming me into your classrooms. Thank you Principal Hawkins and Assistant Principal Lynch for making this residency possible. Thank you to all of the paras who add such vital support to the classroom. And of course a big, huge, enormous thank you to the Second Graders of PS90 for the beautiful words you shared with me!

Sincerely,
Amina Henry

Brooklyn

Brooklyn is the place where people live and where we have freedom
Brooklyn looks like a smart shark and a beautiful butterfly
She smells like bananas and strawberries
Brooklyn has golden and blue eyes
She wears a glittery baby blue diamond dress Brooklyn tastes like fast food and sounds like electricity, a rainbow, paint dropping, music, and roller coasters Brooklyn loves people, Dominos pizza, and New York City
She loves to sing and dance
She feels like solid bricks, but sometimes soft sand
When Brooklyn opens her mouth, she says,
"This is a wonderful day, Brooklyn is the best"

Squishy Spring Poem

It's spring when the world is pretty flowers blooming rain-blooming school-sweet clouds-warm seeds-delicious worms-good
It's spring when the sun shines like a diamond Petal leaves-colorful garden-handsome pretty It's spring when the world sounds like drip drip with a little bit of sugar ding ding ding
pip pip pip

My Squishy Spring Poem

In spring the world is sunny
People can play in the park or at the beach to play with your brother

If he wants to
It sounds like tip tip

The Poetry Room

In the poetry room, sometimes we rhyme
But not all the time
Red flowers are all over the floor
We play with lovely letters
The walls are silver, gold and hot pink
The couch is sky blue
It sounds like nature in here
Like words
Like a fox's howl
A butterfly's flutter
A bear's roar
A penguin's squawk
A bee's buzz
It smells like chicken, tacos, and a green meadow Words, words, words
It tastes like rhyming cotton candy
And a heavenly hot pocket
We lick ice cream
Kids drive parents crazy
Dads cook breakfast sandwiches and cheeseburgers
But they are lazy
Moms are scary when they lose their phones
But they work really hard and we love them
They need a break
We give them a pillow
In the corner, VecMan stretches and stretches
It's raining words in here, wet and stormy
But it's snowing outside
Is it Christmas?
The light above looks like the sun
Inside here is the memory of our trip to the salt marsh
We saw mussels black as pants, black as night
We are scientists and policemen and firefighters and taco men
We dream about being eleven
And being a baby again
And being LeBron James
In another

Our Delight Song

Ms. Sigler's Class

The Poetry Room

In the poetry room, the earth goes and goes

There are no paragraphs in here

Only stanzas

There are goldfish in a beautiful, big bowl

The walls and floors are silver

The couch is red like lava

A black and white cat purrs on the couch

Look at our rainbow chairs!

We're rhyming

With perfect timing

There is a storm outside

Boom! Boom! Crash!

But in here our mommies sing us songs

And say our names nicely

It smells like smoke and candy

It's sweet like frosting and crispy carrots

Inside of this room there's love and niceness, chinchillas and bunnies all round

Meerkats meow

Dogs bark

A giraffe eats baby leaves in a corner

There is a unicorn on the roof!

Ms. Sigler eats broccoli while petting guinea pig

Cardi B and Nikki Minja sing us songs

Our fathers are working on their computers

Our mommies cook pepper soup, tacos, and spaghetti

We're helping in our Easy Bake ovens

We make sunny words

It's like we're in Florida or Virginia

or Chelsea Piers

Inside of this room are our memories of getting our first fluffy hamster and our first bunny and that time we went to Sky Zone for two hours

We remember eating sand and playing with our best cousins and having our brothers press our belly buttons

We are cashiers and body builders and police officers and doctors for kids and ninjas

We are everything creative

We are stripes

We are stars

Our Delight Song

We are spotty cheetahs prancing in the woods

The Poetry Room

In the poetry room we write about how we feel

We are happy in here be because we can rhyme

All the time

We sound good

The walls are aqua blue and the couches are pink and the chairs are rainbow

On the table, there is violet rose

The rose says, Let's stay and never die

It smells like pizza perfume in here

Or maybe the beach

Let's go swimming

We eat jolly ranchers and sticky, sweet strawberries

We are victorious in here

We are cute chinchillas

Our sisters are in here and our brothers

Our neighbors and our friends

Mommies are doing the laundry

Daddies are sleeping or making chicken

We cuddle in our beautiful blankets

And play with our Roblox figures

The sun sometimes comes in through the window

But sometimes there's a storm

Or a hurricane

We hoot like owls

We meow like cats

We roar like lions

Inside this room, there is the memory of the White Post Farm and going to Pennsylvania and the memory of our first friends

And the memory of when we got our dogs

We remember going to Splish Splash

We remember crying Waa Waa

We remember being babies and playing with our

Special toy

We are chefs and doctors and teachers and cops

We sing and sing and sing

Brooklyn

Brooklyn is the place where on Fridays there's fantastic fireworks Brooklyn looks like a yellow and gold cat and smells like

Brooklyn has blue striped eyes, brown hair and a pink nose Brooklyn tastes like pizza and ice cream and sounds like crunchy leaves, noisy cars and fun darkness Brooklyn loves group hugs, swimming, tacos and helping others
It feels like a taco, round and soft
When Brooklyn opens its mouth, it says,
Freedom for everyone! I love pizza!

Ms. Wnek's Class

The Poetry Room

In the poetry room we see green and silver and black and gold and baby blue and violet purple

Some things are tan

Like people

Dolphins swim and a black panther roars

Dog barks, a cat meows, and baby birds sing

We eat cupcakes, bananas, strawberry cake, and cotton candy

Ms. Wnek makes a ninja pose

Best friends make silly faces and make each other happy

Mommies read us books

They make us chicken, rice and beans

Sometimes they make us ice cream sandwiches

In one corner, some daddies make silly faces

And some take naps and some play with us

In another corner, are stuffed tigers, lions, bunnies,

And dog-shaped pillows

The sun shines through the window

It feels warm in here

It's like Coney Island in here and Splish Splash, the water park

We feel like we're in a hotel with a pool

In Florida

We're all taxi drivers and doctors and teachers

We're chefs that serve wonderful words

It feels like yesterday

Which was a good day

It feels lovely in here and sweet

We dance gorgeously

We're so lucky

The earth hugs us all

Our Delight Song

We are white unicorns running on the water
We are really hairy-maned lions dancing to rock music
We are all the seasons
We swim
We throw snow balls
We jump in leaves
We play with our baby brothers and sisters and friends
We are sunshine
We are black and red trees
We pick apples
